I have been impressed with the urgency of doing. Knowing is not enough; we must apply. Being willing is not enough; we must do.

Nigeria introduces inactivated polio vaccine into routine immunization system

In February, Nigeria became the first polio endemic country to introduce the inactivated polio vaccine (IPV) into its routine immunization system. The Minister of Health, Dr Alhassan Khaliru, described this as "... a quantum-leap opportunity for Nigeria in the polio eradication endgame strategy."

The introduction of IPV into routine immunization systems is part of one of the four major objectives of the Global Polio Eradication Initiative (GPEI). In May 2012, the World Health Assembly called on all countries that were using only the oral polio vaccine (OPV) to introduce at least one dose of IPV into routine immunization schedules by the end of 2015. This is the largest globally coordinated vaccine introduction project in history.

The launch in Nigeria was supported by the partners of the GPEI, including the Nigerian Government, the World Health Organization, UNICEF, Rotary International, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention and the Gavi Alliance.

Speaking at the launch ceremony, the Minister stated that combining OPV and IPV had threefold benefits: acting as risk mitigation in the global plan to phase out the use of OPVs in 2016, boosting immunity against type 1 and 3 wild poliovirus (WPV) and also tackling the risk of circulating vaccine-derived poliovirus (cVDPV).
